bronze sculpture volume 5.

man is considered the supreme animal , but think of the extraordinary magic of the rest — they flew before us, they were olympic gymnasts long before the olympics, they can run faster, are stronger, can see in the dark, can navigate and swim vast distances in the sea and underwater, and survive extremes of temperature.

they have societal rules and justice, they can sing songs, act and mimic — they dance, have extraordinary hearing, vision and sense of smell and wear designer clothes — no two giraffes or zebras have markings the same. they were as large as dinosaurs and can be smaller than splendid fairy wrens. they communicate in many “languages” of their own.

animals have great dignity and cannot blush. perhaps they have no reason to.

“animal magic” exhibition 2012

to create a sense of this animal magic, to suggest power, intelligence, the miracle of colour and pattern and movement, so that the still metal and stone seem alive — that is my intention.
